STATEMENT TO

[First Reprint]

SENATE, No. 3434

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DATED: MAY 12, 2021

The Assembly Education Committee reports favorably Senate Bill No. 3434 (1R).

This bill requires a board of education to temporarily provide special education and related services to certain students who exceed, or will exceed, the current age of eligibility for special education and related services in the 2020-2021 school year, 2021-2022 school year, and the 2022-2023 school year.

Under current State Board of Education regulations, district boards of education are required to provide a free, appropriate public education, in accordance with an individualized education program, to students with disabilities age three through 21. If a student turns 21 years of age during the school year, defined as the period between July 1 and June 30, the student is entitled to finish the school year. On June 30 of the student's final school year, the student is no longer eligible for special education and related services. This process is commonly referred to as "aging out."

This bill would extend the age eligibility for special education and related services by requiring boards of education to provide the education and services included in a student's individualized education program (IEP) to students attaining the age of 21 during the 2020-2021 school year, the 2021-2022 school year, and the 2022-2023 school year, provided that the parent of the student and the IEP team determine that the student requires additional or compensatory special education and related services, including transition services.

Under the bill, students attaining the age of 21 during the 2020-2021 school year would be eligible for special education and related services in the 2021-2022 school year; students attaining the age of 21 during the 2021-2022 school year would be eligible for special education and related services in the 2022-2023 school year; and students attaining the age of 21 in the 2022-2023 school year would be eligible for special education and related services in the 2023-2024 school year. Unless otherwise provided in the student's IEP or as ordered by a hearing officer, complaint investigation, or court of competent jurisdiction, a student would not be eligible to receive special education and related services under this bill beyond the school year in which he or she attains the age of 22.

A student receiving special education and related services, including transition services, pursuant to the provisions of the bill, will be afforded the same rights, privileges, and remedies provided to students with disabilities pursuant to State law, State Board of Education regulations concerning special education, and the federal “Individuals with Disabilities Education Act,” 20 U.S.C. s.1400 et seq. Any disputes that arise with respect to the provision or nature of services provided to a student with disabilities in the additional year as provided under the provisions of the bill may be addressed, as determined by the parent of the student, by either:

(1) mediation;

(2) a written request for a complaint investigation submitted to the Director of the Office of Special Education Policy and Dispute Resolution in the Department of Education; or

(3) a special education due process hearing pursuant to the provisions of applicable federal and State law, regulations promulgated thereto.

Finally, the bill provides that the special education and related services, including transition services, provided to students with disabilities pursuant to the provisions of the bill, to the extent permitted by federal law, will be paid for from the monies received by the State or a school district under the federal “Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act,” the federal “Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropriations (CRRSA) Act, 2021,” the federal “American Rescue Plan (ARP) Act,” Pub.L.117-2, or any other federal funding provided to address the impact of the coronavirus pandemic on elementary and secondary schools as it becomes available. To the extent that these federal funds do not cover the costs borne by school districts to provide the special education and related services, including transition services, to students with disabilities pursuant to the provisions of the bill, the bill requires the State to appropriate funds as necessary from the Property Tax Relief Fund to reimburse school districts for these costs. The special education and related services funded pursuant to the provisions of the bill may include, but are not limited to, the additional staff, programs, and facilities deemed necessary by school districts to provide the special education and related services, including transition services, required under the bill.

As reported by the committee, this bill is identical to Assembly Bill No. 5366, which was amended and reported by the committee on this same date.
